Inside guide to getting published

Deakin University Library invites academic staff and higher degree by research students to a free seminar. The Inside guide to getting published follows on from the previous successful seminar held in June at the Melbourne Burwood campus.

The seminar features four experts from Deakin University who will give insights into how to get published in a competitive research environment, and provide advice and valuable tips on developing strategies for getting published.

- Dr. Georgina Kelly, ECR Program Manager, Deakin Research
  Publishing strategies: when to publish what during your PhD; conferences and journals and what to publish where; impact versus reputation; how to get your paper read by others.

- Professor Terry Evans, School of Education
  Being strategic about publishing with(in) a thesis: the public and accessible nature of contemporary PhD theses and the implications for publishing during candidature and within a thesis, and for subsequent publications.

- Associate Professor Karen Stagnitti, HDR coordinator, School of Health & Social Development
  Transitioning: riding the wave: the transition from HDR student to Early Career Researcher, and how to recognise opportunities for presenting at conferences, networking and publishing.

- Associate Professor Rohan Bastin, Deputy Head of School, School of History Heritage and Society and School of International Political Studies
  Developing pragmatic and rewarding publishing strategies; strategies and opportunities for having multiple publication projects on the go; tailoring one’s output to the esteem criteria relevant to disciplines as well as one’s own esteem criteria relevant to one’s specialist area.
